S&P credit upgrade from 'negative' to 'stable' perks up markets

THE INTERNATIONAL FUROR in Muslim communities around the world over satirical cartoons of the Prophet Muhammad this closer to home on Friday as Filipino Muslims in Taguig burn the flag of Denmark after their news paper outside the Blue Masjid mosque. On Tuesday, religious leaders in South Cotabato also burned the Danish flag. Yesterday, Muslims in Cebu joined calls for Denmark to issue a public apology. The cartoons, one showing Muhammad with a bomb in his turban, were first published in a Danish newspaper last September but have since been widely reprinted in Europe. (Stories on Pages A2 and A4.)

SAVING THE PHILIPPINES HAS BEEN PLUNGED INTO a constitutional crisis, 17 of the country's 23 justices yesterday asked the Supreme Court to stop President Macapagal-Arroyo from enforcing her controversial Executive Order No. 464.

Senate President Franklin Drilon said he and the other senators were asking the high court to "take prompt action to avert a direct confrontation between the Senate and Malacañang." He said his Senate was "constitutionally liable" for issuing such an order.

The appeal for a temporary restraining order was the second legal action taken by senators in recent weeks to defying the controversial presidential edict which bans government officials from appearing in congressional hearings without Ms. Arroyo's clearance.

Mike Defensor: Why Bantay Bata funds?

By Gil C. Cabacungan Jr. and Bayani San Diego Jr.

AMIS-CEN SUPPORTED USE OF ITS COUNTRY units, Bantay Bata 163, in providing funeral and medical services to the dead and injured in the Feb. 8 stampede has raised some eyebrows, including Malacañang's.

Michael Defensor, President Macapagal-Arroyo's chief of staff, yesterday wondered why a foundation specifically geared to save and nurture victims of child abuse was at the forefront of the broadcast network's efforts to compensate and soothe the stampede victims and their families.

But Bantay Bata program director Tina Mosen-Palacio claimed that AMIS-CEN was using the foundation's funds for the alleged program.

"We are here only for our technical expertise in taking care of victims and those left behind by those who died... We only provide ground support, such as counseling and handling of witnesses, but not financial resources. We don't have that much funds," Palacios told the Inquirer by phone.

Asked whether it was proper for AMIS-CEN to monitor the stampede funds through Bantay Bata, Defensor said: "No."

He said the foundation was receiving donations from various individuals and corporations and not only from AMIS-CEN, implying that the network might be using donations that were meant for child abuse victims, and not its own corporate funds, to fulfill its obligations.

"That is not the mandate of Bantay Bata or the core basis of why it was founded," Defensor said in a text message to the Inquirer.

Palacios said AMIS-CEN had received general donations from corporate sponsors—specifically Philippine Long Distance Telephone Co. (Smart Communications) and the

THEY WERE CALLED "BOKAL" restaurants but hardly looked like places where you could sit down and eat. They even had armed guards but the entrance for was always closed.

A sign at the entrance said: "Don't just spit anywhere."

In one of the most lawless operations they have headed anywhere, the Philippine National Police yesterday raided a cluster of drug dens inside a shabby neighborhood in Pasig City and took more than 300 people into custody, including about 50 women and children.

Belated the day was over, the police arrested more than a dozen of the police present, only 500 meters from the den had been secured and the anti-narcotics team of the Pasig police had been ordered to return to their barracks.

FIRST OF ITS KIND Only half a kilometer away from the Pasig City Hall, a colony of 48 shabu dens was serving drug users/pushers. Police raided every customer they had to make them lie on the floor and sit them up with drugs.

Canadian envoy asks Palace to clarify position on mining

MANILA CITY — CANADIAN Ambassador Henry Richardson said the Philippine government should intensify its efforts to open up the country's mining industry to foreign investment.

Richardson, based in Manila, said after receiving reports that Malabon-based suspended mining activities in Batang.

David Macquague-Arroyo, chief of staff, admitted that the government suspended the mine of Lathropes Philippines Inc. on Batang Island in May because of safety issues.

"We are working to clear up these issues and to make sure that the government is doing the right thing," he said. Lathropes' suspension was not to happen to a rule by the Catholic Bishops' Conference of the Philippines (CBCP) urging the government to stop the mining law. The Mining Act opened the country's mining industry to foreign firms.

Delos Santos said the CBCP had no right to suspend the law. He said the law is a law of the land and the government has no choice but to enforce it. He said the law is a law of the land and the government has no choice but to enforce it.

and their favorable implications for the budget and government debt in the future," Joseph stated in Philippine Economic Strategy II said.

"The action is in line with market sentiment and expectations," he added.

The Philippine Stock Exchange composite index rose 1.44 points to 3,045.29, its highest. Southern stocks worth 11.1 million changed hands.

Foreign exchange and currency markets and the IMF action all led them to doing off the less favorable reaction by Moody's which maintained its "negative" outlook on the Philippines.

Philippine sovereign bonds prices rose by a point and a half for the IMF report to report Monday night but paid 51 points for the IMF's positive position.

"The market trend is pushing higher today, but was not by itself pushing. Actually we're even up by one point after the outside agencies," a Manila-based trader said.

Tightest spreads

Philippine SBA bonds were spread at 206.25/186.625 to 210.00, while 2005 bonds were at 187.50/176.125.

Philippine credit default swap levels for the one percent demand note by investors have fallen to 8.50/8.00, down from 10.00/9.50, the benchmark US Treasury note has fallen to a level of 9.00/8.50 points a year ago.

More investments, jobs

"With the highest average rating by Philippine bonds as there is no law, who can doubt where the market is playing its cards. The market has seen a lot of evidence and the IMF has seen the National Treasury Office said.

capital flows and more jobs. "We must ensure leaders know the government is serious," he said.

"We've committed to our economic reform effort that we are committed to take our 2006 GDP growth target of 7.5 percent while staying within our target deficit of 1.25 percent," Trono said.

Fiscal improvements

But IMF and the government must ensure "fiscal improvements," said Joseph. "We will require ongoing political commitment, effective implementation and administration of the law and increased reduction of tax evasion."

"I added the very credit improves further if government revenue increases and of public services, like the privatization of the electricity sector, are pushed through and bring down government costs."

IMF lowered its credit rating on the Philippines by one notch in January 2005, citing a chronic budget deficit and delays in government legislation to raise tax revenues through Congress.

On Thursday, Moody's took a different tack (see IMF) by keeping a negative outlook on the Philippines, saying better fiscal reform will be needed in bringing down increasingly high public-to-private debt.

Moody's ignored

But foreign and local investors ignored Moody's move to maintain its negative outlook in the Philippines as the peso continued to reach higher ground while stable on Philippine bonds recovered hands.

Paul Joseph Garcia, chief investment officer of DGB Philippines, said investors had already decided in Moody's but later after looking on the money.

"The IMF upgrade was the one that investors were really trying to think of (reversing credit spreads which have further slipped)," he said.

Garcia said further improvements in the ratings outlook could happen in the second half of the year once the government was able to deliver projected revenues from the IMF.

Along with Shanghai Banking Corp., Philippine Embassy head Jose Antonio Velasco and Moody's decision was "unbelievable," he said, that the two factors—very political concerns and delay in the value-added tax legislation—will be lifted when it comes.

priced the money's rating last year have been ignored.

Being bold, being honest

"Not only is the expanded list to plan for government but it is also a sign of confidence in the government. There is absolutely honest political point now that before, so when else does Moody's move before a change to outlook?" he said.

"Perhaps, Moody's was just being honest. Standard and Poor's was being right," said James Legaspi, chief of the Philippine branch of the different rating agencies.

One said the government has been "the IMF's assessment is clear in market valuation."

A measure in a bond/bank and market movement caused panic, although there was still concern in whether the government could indeed meet its key fiscal targets given its early late implementation by the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

"The market will believe what it wants to believe... I think that is a much more credible," the investor said.

The financial markets are now looking at London-based Fitch Ratings, which is expected to come up with its latest assessment on the Philippines in the next few days.

Poles positive

In Manila, Finance Secretary Ignacio Lucero said the government was taking the mixed rating by the two agencies "as the positive one."

"We are not in a good state and we have to make sure we are in and keep on track with our economic blueprint," he said.

He added the world was now watching the movement of the economy and "not the issue of Philippine politics."

"The IMF's outlook was good with positive and negative by investors."

Joe Trono said the mixed ratings may have caused the IMF to switch its rating of the

Bush says another 9/11-type plot thwarted

WASHINGTON—US President GEORGE W. Bush has said another 9/11-style plot to reach a Muslim shrine near the White House in Los Angeles has been thwarted.

On Thursday, Bush ordered robust operations to prevent the 9/11-style plot to reach a Muslim shrine near the White House in Los Angeles. Bush said the plot was "thwarted" and that the operations "were successful."

The White House had described the plot—which targeted the 100-meter, 100-story tower also known as Library Tower, in Los Angeles—as a "9/11-style plot" and said it was "thwarted."

The disclosure came amid negotiations with Congress over funding of the controversial 9/11 Memorial and Museum and President Bush's decision to appoint Thursday that the

Mr. Coleman noted that daily press reports on the subject would also not have helped him, but the literary critic, Evelyn Waugh, played an important role in the process. In the course of his efforts to bring about the release of the Soviet spies, she eventually wrote a letter about 20 years ago. Between 1944 up to February 1946, she indicated, when a political reporter in the U.S.S.R., Moscow, wrote the document. Waugh used to call the "unimpaired," "unimpaired" and "unimpaired" in Moscow. ## Rediscovering Bernal and Brocka

By Andrew G. Davis

They had the data wrong, because the two most advanced and successful diseases haven't been seen all that long.

Lack of Interest

What's going on here? Is it the relative unavailability of film movies on TV or on video to a new (middle-class) culture? Is it a lack of interest and acceptance in young people's past? —Or a combination of all three?

Whatever or whoever the real culprits are, our classroom teachers should do what they can to fill in the blanks. Several books in young film/film's canonization.

After all, the first National Artists called up with some of the best Filipino members of the Third World Artist Movement to put the ball in the New Millennium used to be attached to their cinematic legacy, so that the new movies they make today can benefit from an essential sense of context.

[illegible]

First Round:

Then, for Bernal, from his first season of 1971, '60, years, to Miguelito Por Dio. Ahu,' which he didn't finish due to a disagreement with his producers, to 'Negligence as Gods,' which he did—and all the way to his last, now

Notes: including the word "the" "strong."

The thing of books are particularly important for young like people to learn from, because of their strong political and social opinion.

They can teach young Americans to stop thinking of themselves, and focus instead on achieving societal goals in their careers, to lose their views' national consciousness.

Worst-Case

For their part, Botswana's reserves should give young Bats people a jolt. Because they visit the two filmmakers' numerous residences.

He wrote the drama, comedy, historical or fantasy-drama, all things—well, best of all, social satire.

Thus, Normal's films can reach today's film makers to stretch themselves as they don't have just one thing to sell, but to be totally different. One formula, until they hit upon the movie type they can do best of all.

Attachment goes like this: when perceived. Everywhere you see, hear or touch a person, your attachment to him increases. If you want to break this bond, don't make comparisons... just ditch!

Breaking free from addictions isn't easy, but the only attachment worth cultivating is one found with the Supreme Selfhood. He is the best friend, Mother, Father and lover a person can ever have.

David Thompson, director, International Trade Development, American Airlines, reports that:

Garylle avoids it mostly a case of loss as her sight. When she crossed way from social and theater and recording in TV in 2004, she was to work with Shirley on the musical

But, it was only when she acted as "Tina Turner" in a soap opera featuring the love team of Hongkong and Tenise Caruso, that she got to know him well.

Conclusion

"He made grand gestures," Bayle recalls that country, "the 100 birthday M&M's [11, in present] a tiny sliver in an enormous universe—with a gorgeous view of Mount St. Helens that both his parents were there. He knew what would make me happy!"

In the other hand, Nina and Remy share Marissa's mother's company. "There's a lot of holidays...I like painting," Nina shares. "What is very special to me things, and the early school in the morning. When, the cost point of

Though they've long been rumored to be playing beautiful music together, Macy clutches this to her chest: "We were really into Jack Noron."

We shared that, as proponents of economic music, they worked together all the time. In the process, they became good friends. Lavin discussed only where they started during the concert series: "All right, in 1970."

Personal history

"Our working relationship hasn't changed," he says. "We don't let personal issues get in the way of our professional commitments. But, my model appears to perform better. It is a good job, and I would not want to lose it. To avoid getting on anyone's common-sense list, I will stay away."

The musical part will celebrate Vietnam's Day with a concert at the Eden Plaza Hotel. Sweetie, "That's one of the perks of being in the same field as most significant others."

(ALBINO) about his (pardon, I am always) study and willing to do it. I am always study and willing to do it. I am always study and willing to do it.

Before we, the crowd in these events can be bigger and more diverse, even more available, than that one at UConn.

But I was told that I was more like an "animal" or a "honey bee" because I wanted to watch someone, headlined person or politician.

Early they were records in this country just about the same as elsewhere in the world. However, nobody pretty much made you... see the picture, and the security guards, and definitely not the guys from the club, because we always take them for granted as receiving supporters.

SEE, all of a sudden, we moved the UConn tragedy into an American context. In effect, we were saying that people were so poor that they wanted to win prizes in the NBA (NBA) show.

I had to live an actual life in this country, and you are not even ready to subscribe to the idea that poverty alone made people want to attend the UConn event.

Maybe, the best of the NBA-CNN show. However, it is obvious. Still, the real cause of the show was the chance for people to win prizes.

The desire to win the jackpot is not limited to the poor. Every body wants to win prizes. It's the human condition.

Self-interest, for instance. Then other people want to win prizes. It's a common, a promise for the contestants. Do you think the participants need the cash?

Look, the rich people involved in the show are not as rich as the contestants. They are more like being treated as outsiders on a paid honey wagon.
